Upon inspection, a master manufacturer present declared, he lamented all frauds relative to trade, which honest emulation and due reward should enn courage; but these frauds in particular, practised by strolling Jews and unprincipled Christians were most pernicious; however, he observed, that while an unnatural taste for foreign productions, or what we believe to be such, prevails, impositions will multiply; nor are the dupes of them in the least pitiable: it is extreme folly to go abroad for those materials we can find essentially as good, if not better, at home. That very knife, with eleven more equally well finished, I sold the Jew for two guineas, who, is like, I perceive by this instance, to make ten guineas profit: Well, 1 remember an old proverb, Alls Alls not gold that glitters. The manufacturers heart-sprung feelings honestly, though not neatly expressed,...
