As Colonel Ross, the Resident in the Persian Gulf, remarks in one of his reports: There are at the present extensive tracts and districts, the extent, capacity, and even position of which are but vaguely known at the seat of Government. Khorassan and the north-east was closed to me, unless I could get leave to return overland to India through Afghanistan or Beloochistan, and the latter country was closed in July and August owing to intense heat. The south-east an officer was at the time engaged in exploring. The south-west had been lately gone over by Major Bell. There remained the north-west, and here two tracts presented themselves, in a groat measure fulfilling the required conditions, viz., that between Kom and Hamadan, and that between Kasveen and Hamadan. Both those are of a size which admits of exploration by an officer not expressly engaged on such duty and bound to return to India by a fixed and not far distant date. Both, too, seemed to promise confirmation of an impression I had received in travelling from the Persian Gulf to the neighbourhood of the Caspian, that the...
