C., April 23-25, 1914, Upon the Invitation of the American Society on International Law at Its Eighth Annual Meeting The conference of teachers of international law was held at the City of Washington April 23-25, 1914, under the auspices of the American Society of International Law, in order to consider what measures, if any, could properly be taken to arouse a greater interest in international law where taught in American institutions of learning; to secure its introduction in American institutions of learning where it is not taught; to call attention to its importance to lawyers in the practice of their profession; and to suggest the advisability of a knowledge of its principles for admission to the bar; and to show, finally, the necessity of an understanding of the subject by the public at large, which in a democracy such as ours determines in the ultimate resort the foreign policy of the United States. It was felt that none were more competent than the teachers of international law to consider these various questions and to reach wise conclusions upon them, and that any suggestions concerning the teaching of international law in American institutions of learning should properly come from the teachers themselves rather than from those not engaged in the teaching of international law. It was believed - and the proceedings of the conference show that the belief was justified - that a conference of teachers of our leading colleges and universities, in which these subjects could be carefully discussed and considered, would result in fruitful recommendations, and that the teaching profession generally would be...
