This item is printed on demand - Print on Demand Neuware - Seminar paper from the year 2004 in the subject Business economics - Personnel and Organisation, grade: 1 (A), University of St. Gallen (Institute for Leadership and Personal Management), language: English, abstract: By analyzing personal interviews, this term paper attempts to grasp the property of what is commonly known as charisma and to explain its virtues and effects, especially with regards to business and leadership. Firstly, a definition of charisma and a description of what is commonly understood by the term charisma are given. This appears to be very difficult because there are so many different meanings and explanations around. There are psychoanalytical explanations that root in the Freudian theory (charisma is a regressive phenomenon: the relationship of a follower to his leader is like that of a five year old to his father), sociological explanations (humans need to have simple explanations for the complexity of today s world, so they cling to a leader) and attribution-based explanations (either based on salience and results or on leader behaviour). But all those explanations have in common that they understand charisma as a concept very much linked to perception. Therefore, charisma is not a single personality type, but something more complex. We each experience the world differently and, as a result, we may interpret the actions of others differently. The specific character of a leader has to be seen by followers as relevant to their situation. If followers do not think their leader s formulation of a strategic vision matches their own aspiration, they re less likely to perceive him or her as a charismatic leader. Also, a person may form a charismatic leader in one specific situation, setting...
